THIS LITTLE HISTORY
OF THE WOOD FAMILY IS DEDICATED

P R E F A C E

The following genealogy has been compiled from records collected during the past few years, and while family tradition was the original foundation for investigations, yet nothing has been recorded herein which has not been verified and proved, either by old wills or records on file at Doylestown, where most of the material has been found, and other places. I have been unable to trace some of the Wood descendants handed down by tradition, and have accordingly omitted them. If such omissions are found, it should, therefore, be understood that is because of insufficient evidence of their authenticity to warrant including them, and I shall be very grateful for such evidence if brought to my attention. The chapter on "Falls Township" is taken, with a few changes and additions, from Battle's "History of Bucks County," and parts of the chapter on "Early English Settlers by the Name of Wood" from "Sketches of the First Emigrant Settlers in Newtown Township, West New Jersey," and Mulford's "History of New Jersey." As to the general plan of the work, it is that usually adopted by American genealogists, and notably that of the McKean Family by Roberdeau Buchanan, who says in his preface: "Therefore, the plan adopted by the best genealogists in this country, and which is decidedly the clearest and simplest, is to classify each generation by itself, and the members thereof in strict order of primogeniture. Upon this system the work proceeds chronologically, the eldest generation first, the latest at the end. Names of persons appear first as children under the biography of their parents, and subsequently as parents of the next generation. Names thus repeated are accompanied by a running Arabic number for convenience of identification. A little examination will readily show how a line of descent may, by these numbers, be traced upward to find the ancestor, or downward to find the descendant."

Most genealogists in this country include in their histories only an account of those bearing the surname of which they write, and omit the descendants of females bearing other surnames. In many cases this is undoubtedly due to the magnitude of a family, but it seems to me that a genealogy, to be complete, should include all the descendants of one person, whether bearing the original surname or not, and it is on these lines that I have endeavored to carry out this genealogy.

Finally, I wish to thank those members of the family who have given their hearty co-operation in assisting me and in furnishing valuable data and information, without which this book could never have been compiled.

HISTORY

EARLY SETTLERS BY THE NAME OF

IN WEST JERSEY

In the year 1677 a commission, composed of nine men, appointed by the proprietors to take charge of affairs in the province of West Jersey, left England in company with a large number of settlers, most of them members of the Society of Friends. The company of settlers arrived at New Castle (Delaware) on the 16th of August, while the commission went on to New York to wait on Governor Andros. These settlers, shortly after their arrival at New Castle, encamped at the mouth of the Narriticon or Raccoon Creek, where a few Swedes had previously settled. After many difficulties with Governor Andros, the commission rejoined these settlers and proceeded in the discharge of a part of their trust. They purchased from the natives three several portions of land upon the Delaware River, the whole reaching from the Assunpink, on the north, to Oldman's Creek, on the south. The West Jersey proprietors had entered into a contract or agreement with five individuals of the County of York, England, directing this commission to grant to the five persons in question the privilege of choosing any one of the tenth parts or shares into which the land they had purchased should be divided. The representatives of the Yorkshire interests chose the land extending from Rankokus to the falls of the Delaware, and this portion was accordingly assigned to them by the commission as the first tenth, sometimes called the "Yorkshire tenth."

This was the first tenth disposed of, and was naturally settled largely by Yorkshire families. The order of apportioning land to the several settlers was determined by the date of the applicant's arrival, advantages being allowed to early applicants, and also according to the number, age and condition of the persons that were brought to the provinces.

Among these early English settlers who came to West Jersey there were more persons of the name of Wood than of any other.¹ They must have been pleased with the scheme of settlement as laid down by the commissioners and proprietors, and must have made its success certain from the beginning. They were men of some estate, as they purchased their property rights before leaving their native land; they were men of education, for they at once took part in the management and control of the new government. Most of them were Quakers, and a perusal of Besse's history of that sect will show the reason why they were so anxious to break up their homes in England and brave the wilds and hardships of America. From 1654 to 1683 persons of the name of Wood were imprisoned in the Hartfordshire, Lancashire, Yorkshire, Durham and Cumberland jails for attending Quaker meetings for worship, and from these sections came most of the Woods who settled in West Jersey.

William Wood was the first to arrive in this new colony. He landed at Burlington in 1677, having come in the "Willing Mind" (John Newcomb, commander), and in 1680 he located thirty-six acres in the town of Burlington. He was followed in eleven months by John Wood, of Yorkshire, who arrived in the Delaware in the tenth month, 1678, in the ship "Shield," of Hull, commanded by Daniel Tods.² In 1682 another John Wood, of Lancashire, a Quaker, came to West Jersey and settled at Burlington on three hundred acres of land at the mouth of the Woodbury Creek. He married and had five children. This family always remained at Burlington. We can consider, then, that these three men were the first of their name to settle in this part of the province. Later, a Henry Wood, of Rhode Island, moved to West Jersey and settled at Burlington, in 1687. He was the son of William Wood, author of "New England Prospect," published in London in 1634. Most of the literature on the early English settlers of West Jersey confuses the above two John Woods and their families, and as a number of their respective children bore the same Christian name the confusion has increased, until it is only after long and exhaustive search that we are able to distinguish at all accurately their respective places in the history of this early colony. I think it safe to assume that these two John Woods in question were in no way related, and especially as they came from different parts of England. John Wood, of Yorkshire, was the only known English settler in the county of Bucks, Pa., in 1678, and some historians state that he was one of the first Quaker settlers in this county, but I mean to show that he was not of the Quaker faith. The "Shield" was the first English vessel to pass up the Delaware as far as Burlington,³ and, arriving in the night, tied up to a tree to await the morning. During the night the weather became extremely cold, and by morning the river was frozen so solid that the passengers walked ashore on the ice.

FALLS TOWNSHIP

Falls is pre-eminently rich in historic associations. The circumstances of its settlement possess an interest not merely local, but important in the history of the county. It has been claimed that the first settlement of Europeans in the state was made by the Dutch from New York, in the early part of the seventeenth century, on an island (afterwards owned by John Wood) at the present site of Morrisville, and, while it lacks confirmation, the fact is well authenticated that there was an overland route from the falls of the Delaware to New York at an early period of colonial history. It was recognized as the "King's Path" in 1675, and its course was nearly identical with that of the turn-pike from Morrisville to Philadelphia. It thus happened that the English crossed over the Delaware to the region above Falls several years before Penn's arrival. And when the Proprietor, in the first enthusiasm of his plans, looked about in quest of a site for his manorial residence, he decided in favor of the wide extended level lands between the "path" and the river as the location for "Pennsbury." In close proximity to the manor was the triangular district of Crookham, the earliest seat of justice of the county. In writing to Col. Henry Sidney, Penn says of Falls: "I find the country wholesome; land, air and water good; divers good sorts of fruits that grow wild, of which plums, peaches and grapes are three; also cedar, cypress, chestnut, black walnut and poplar, with five sorts of oaks—black, white, Spanish, red and swamp oak, the most desirable of all, the leaf like the English willows.”

In 1679, Governor Andros ordered a survey of the land at Falls, and at the time of Holmes’s survey (1682) it appears that Falls Township was apportioned among no less than thirty landholders. Of the tract adjoining the river, the land of John Wood was farthest north, and consisted of 478 acres, together with an island lying opposite in the Delaware River, and then in regular order were the lands of Daniel Brinsley, John Acreman, Richard Ridgeway, William Biles, Joshua Boare, Robert Lucas, Gilbert Wheeler, William Biles, Samuel Darte, Daniel Gardner, John Luffe, Lionel Brittan, George Brown, James Harrison and George Heathcote. In the second tier of farms, beginning at the Wakefield line (which is the line bounding the western end of John Wood’s land), were those of Jeffery Hawks, Ann Milcomb, James Hill, John and Thomas Rowland, Thomas Wolfe, and Ralph Smith, while the westerly row comprised the lands of William Darte, John Haycock, John Wheeler, Jonathan Witscard, Thomas Atkinson, and Thomas Rowland. These lands constituted the township of Falls as erected in 1692, when, as will be seen by the map, its shape was nearly rectangular, and the area less than half what it is at present. Falls is now one of the most thickly populated sections of the county. The census of 1880 shows a population of 2,385 in the township, and in the borough of Morrisville, 968. The latter is the largest town in the southeastern part of the county. Its site was originally owned by John Wood, and in later years it was known as "Colvin's Ferry," Patrick Colvin being the proprietor of the landing on the Pennsylvania shore in 1772. There was once some prospect of the national capital being located within the limits of Falls Township. The federal district would have included the site of Morrisville, which location was decided upon by resolutions of Congress in 1783. This was intended as a compromise between the claims of New York and Philadelphia. In 1784 commissioners were appointed and empowered to lay out the proposed district and take means for the erection of public buildings. Washington was asked for his advice, which was not favorable to this action on the part of Congress, and the matter was dropped.

WOOD FAMILY

FIRST GENERATION

John Wood

1. JOHN WOOD, of Attercliffe, in the parish of Sheffield, Yorkshire, in 1677 purchased of George Hutchinson, of Sheffield, a quantity of proprietary rights, including a sixty-fourth share in the province of West Jersey, to be enjoyed by him upon his arrival there.⁴ The ship-book of the "Shield" shows that he was a passenger on that boat with his five children—John, Joseph, Ester, Mary and Sarah. Nothing is said as to his wife, so I think it may fairly be assumed that she died prior to his departure for America, otherwise there would surely have been some reference to her in the ship's book. It might be of interest to note that Thomas Wood, a brother of John Wood, came on the same ship, and settled at Burlington, N. J.⁵ John Wood settled temporarily on lands purchased from Richard Randall and John Champion, on Creswick Creek, but shortly after moved across the Delaware to Falls, in Crookhorn District, Bucks County, and settled on a tract of 478 acres, together with an island lying opposite the same in the Delaware River.⁶

John Wood was, with Richard Noble and William Ridgeway, a representative of the extreme eastern end of the county, before what was called the "Upland Court,"⁷ held September 13, 1681, William Biles and Robert Lucas on the bench. William Biles was the first constable at Falls, April 19, 1693. In 1680 Thomas Loyd was informed by Benjamin Fletcher, of New York, "We have received their Majesties' commission for the government of Pennsylvania," and on May 31, 1684, John Wood received a patent from William Penn confirming the previous grant of his 478 acres of land and the island, made to him by Governor Andros, in 1679. John Wood's lands comprised a part of the present site of Morrisville, Pa., and had a river-front of one mile.⁸ His estates must have been rather extensive, because a report of the jury laying out the townships of Bucks County, in 1692, bounds the towns both of Wakefield and Falls by lands of John Wood.⁹ He also owned large tracts of land in West Jersey.¹⁰ The original Indian title of his land in Bucks County was extinguished by private purchase on July 15, 1682, at which time the name "Grey Stone" was applied to his tract.¹¹ We know that he raised cattle, for in 1684 the records show that "John Wood had cattle in Bucks County ;"¹² he was also a carpenter.

John Wood was the only known English settler in the County of Bucks in 1678. He was a member of Assembly in 1682-3.¹³ His eldest son, John Wood, died prior to 1687, for in a deed on that date his father refers to his "only son, Joseph Wood."¹⁴ His will* is dated March 20, 1692, and was proved on September 12, 1692. His executors were his son Joseph and his son-in-law Isaac Smalley, but as the latter did not qualify,¹⁵ the duty of settling the estate fell entirely upon Joseph Wood. The land which he, John Wood, had received from William Penn, he deeded to Joseph Wood on January 26, 1687. I hardly think John Wood could have been a Quaker, as he is supposed to have been, for the following reason: In his will he names his son Joseph as his executor, and in deeds on record of the same year he refers to him in the most loving and endearing terms. Now, as Joseph Wood was baptized in 1691, and is known to have entered the Baptist ministry a few years later, it is hardly probable that his father, if a Friend, would have so referred to him, because of the very positive views held by Friends on these subjects.

2. THOMAS WOOD, of Yorkshire, England, arrived with his brother, John Wood, in the "Shield" in 1678, and settled at Burlington, N. J., where he married Mary Howli in 1685, by whom he had two sons and three daughters. He owned large tracts of land bordering on Allowaynes Creek, which he willed to his wife and children. He died between 1709 and 1713, his will having been proved in the latter year, and he appointed his son Thomas his sole executor. I am unable to trace the descendants of Thomas Wood, as this branch of the family seems to have died out by 1750.

SECOND GENERATION

Children of John Wood [1]

3. JOSEPH WOOD, the son of John Wood, was born at Hull, in Yorkshire, in the year 1659.¹⁵ He came to this country with his father in 1678¹⁶ and settled with him at Falls, Bucks County, Pa. He was baptized by Mr. Keach at Burlington, N. J., on April 2, 1691; and was ordained a minister of the Baptist Church on September 25, 1708.¹⁷ Prior to this time he had attended a little church at Cold Spring, near Falls, founded by Thomas Dungan, of Rhode Island, in 1684.¹⁸ This church broke up in 1702. Joseph Wood also attended a church at Burlington, which broke up in 1699. On October 9, 1699, he joined Pennepek church, of which church he was elected a deacon on October 6th of the same year. This was the first Baptist church of any note and permanency in the province. The name Pennepek was formerly written "Pemmepeka," which is the name of a little stream running near the place of worship. The house was a stone building, thirty-three feet by thirty feet, with pews, galleries and a stove. In one corner of it stood the pulpit, and the galleries in the opposite angles. The house was erected in 1707 on a lot of one acre, given by the Rev. Samuel Jones, in the township of Lowerdublin, in the county of Philadelphia, eleven miles north of that city. The first preacher of this church was Elias Keach; then John Watts; then Samuel Jones; and in 1708, Joseph Wood.

Joseph Wood was reckoned a good preacher, but in the latter part of his life his influence was much lessened by some family and personal unhappiness.¹⁹ His successor was Abel Morgan, appointed in 1711. Joseph Wood died on September 15, 1747, in his eighty-ninth year.²⁰ He seems to have been associated in some way with Mr. Keith in 1691, when Keith and his followers, known as "Keithian Quakers," broke away from the Quaker church.²¹ This separation, according to the Rev. Morgan Edwards, was owing to a difference of opinion touching on "the sufficiency of what every man naturally has within himself for the purpose of his own salvation." (Some denied that sufficiency, and consequently magnified the external word, Christ, etc., above Barclay's measure. These were headed by George Keith, hence the name Keithian Quakers.) When this order broke up the majority of the members became Baptists, and were known as Keithian Baptists, or Quaker Baptists. Eventually, Mr. Edwards says, they became Seventh Day Baptists. Joseph Wood was a carpenter by trade. In 1684 he received from his father 470 acres of land, together with an island.²² On June 21, 1703, a patent was issued to him for 664 acres across the falls, by commissioners of William Penn.²³ The original land which he had received from his father he deeded in part to his sons Jabez, Josiah and Benjamin. Benjamin, by will, dated October 25,

1725, divided his share of land between his brothers Jabez and Josiah. This land, all or in part, remained in the family until 1764,²⁴ when the last seventy acres and the island were sold to Adam Hooper. Joseph Wood was justice of the peace, Bucks County, July 13, 1693,²⁵ and in 1717 petitioned for leave to start a ferry across the Delaware at the falls.²⁶ Joseph Wood married three times,²⁷ and had, altogether, nine children. He married first Elizabeth, in 1687, who was baptized at Burlington March 16, 1700, died May 26, 1704, and was buried at Falls. On March 5, 1706, he married Katherine Godfrey, who died about 1729. About the year 1733 he married Katherine Siverts, daughter of Cornelius Siverts, of Philadelphia (evidently Dutch). We know little of his children, except of his son, John Wood, who, for some reason, impossible to discover, left his home and settled at Hempstead, Queens County, Long Island.²⁸ It is possible that the family trouble above referred to had something to do with it, and this trouble may have been superinduced by one of Joseph Wood's latter marriages. I have been unable to find the will of Joseph Wood on record, and, as I have found all the other wills of the family, I am inclined to believe he died intestate, and that he deeded away his real estate prior to his death. Otherwise, I think deeds would have turned up made by his oldest son, Jabez Wood, as the colonial laws relating to the inheritance of real estate were the same as those of England, and Joseph Wood's property would all have gone to his eldest son. I can think of no other explanation of the absence of any deeds on file made by Jabez Wood, and his will disposes of practically no real estate.

* As John Wood was married in 1728, he could hardly have been a child by Joseph Wood's second wife, whom he married in 1706, for it would have made him barely twenty-one years old at the time of his (John's) marriage. Therefore, I think we may safely conclude that he was by Joseph's first wife.

4. ESTER (WOOD) SMALLEY, eldest daughter of John Wood, married Isaac Smalley, of Piscataway, N. J., and had a son Isaac, who married and had a number of children. He died in 1724. Isaac Smalley, Sr., was named by John Wood as one of his executors, but declined to qualify. Ester Wood Smalley received 300 acres of land in West Jersey, besides the first land which John Wood had, upon his arrival, purchased of Richard Ramsdal and John Champeon, near Burlington, N. J.

5. SARAH (WOOD) BILES, second daughter of John Wood, married Charles Biles, a prominent farmer of Falls, Pa. Sarah Wood Biles received no land from her father, but this was presumably due to the fact that her husband was a large land-owner, while her sisters, who did receive his real estate, had married men who were not so fortunate. Mr. Biles died prior to 1692.

The Biles Family

William Biles, with his wife Jane, children, William, George, John, Elizabeth, Johanna, Rebecca and Mary, and three servants, came from Dorchester, England, in the "Elizabeth and Sarah," landing the fourth of April, 1679. He was accompanied by his younger brother Charles, and both were extensive landed proprietors. Their titles were derived from Governor Andros, of New York. William was an active citizen, a man of talent, and a distinguished preacher among the Friends, of which faith the family had been for a number of years. William Biles was sued by Governor Evans for £300 for publicly saying of him: "He is but a boy; he is not fit to be a governor, we'll kick him out; we'll kick him out." Although Evans obtained a judgment, he failed to collect, but, seeing Mr. Biles shortly after in Philadelphia, he caused his arrest and imprisoned him for one month. The first monthly meeting of Friends in the State of Pennsylvania was held in his house, and it was there that his brother Charles married Sarah Wood. It is probable that she joined the Quaker Church prior to her marriage, as all the Biles were prominent among that sect.

7. JABEZ WOOD, second son of Joseph Wood by his first wife, Elizabeth, was born about 1690, and died in 1763 at Falls, where he is buried. He married Amy, and had three children. By his will, dated November 16, 1759, he appointed his son Benjamin sole executor and left his property to his children—Benjamin and Susannah, with instructions that they turn over to their sister Elizabeth a certain sum. Evidently Jabez Wood disapproved of her husband, Mr. Carman, and of her marriage, and showed it in this way.

9. BENJAMIN WOOD, fifth child of Joseph Wood, was born about 1694 at Falls, where he always lived. He never married. By his will, dated October 15, 1725, he left to two of his brothers, Jabez and Josiah, the land which he had received from his father in 1723. He died about 1729.

10. JOHN WOOD, sixth child of Joseph Wood by his first wife, was born at Falls about 1695, and later moved to Hempstead, L. I., where he married, on August 24, 1728,²⁹ Mary Carman, daughter of Benjamin Carman. He had four children, the first three of whom were all baptized together at St. George's Church, Hempstead, L. I., on February 22, 1736.³⁰ From this it would seem that John Wood did not join the Episcopal Church until eight years after his marriage, as the Church would not baptize the children unless at least one of the parents was a church-member. Thus, in many cases, none of the children of a family were baptized until one or both of the parents had joined the Church. Then the whole family of children were baptized on the same day. John Wood registered his earmark in 1729. In 1748 he was appointed justice of the peace, and in 1754 commissioner of highways.³¹ John Wood was a farmer by occupation, besides acting in many public offices, and was a man of some prominence. He seems to have entirely broken away from the other members of his family in Pennsylvania, for there are no records on file to show that there was any family intercourse, as there was between his other brothers. He died at Hempstead, between April and October, 1765, and is buried there. His personal estate he divided, by will dated April 26, 1765, among his three surviving children, Hannah, Mary and Catherine, with a small remembrance to his grand-son Samuel Wood, and appointed as executors Patrick Mott and his brothers-in-law, Samuel and Adam Carman.³²

The Carman Family*

John Carman came from Roxbury to Lynn, Mass., in 1631; moved to Stamford, Conn., in 1641, and in 1644 settled at Hempstead, L. I., where he died prior to 1658. He married Florence, and had three children, John, Joshua and Caleb. John, born 1633, died 1684, married Hannah and had several children, among them Caleb, who died in 1746, who married Margaret, and had Mary, who married John Wood. About 1700 a number of the Carmans moved to Monmouth County, N. J., but Adam Carman, a brother of Mary, probably remained at Hempstead, as there are records showing that he was a land-holder there about that time. Whether Mary Carman was living at Hempstead or in Monmouth County when she met John Wood, I am unable to say, but it would seem as though she had met him in New Jersey while staying with her relatives in Monmouth County,— probably at her uncle's, who lived there. Mary Carman was married at Hempstead, L. I., where, I believe, was the home of her parents.

Children of Jabez Wood [7]

11. ELIZABETH (WOOD) CARMAN, youngest child of Jabez Wood, married a Carman, probably a son of the Rev. James Carman, of Monmouth County, N. J., who died in 1756. In her father's will, his other two children are directed to give her a certain sum out of his estate. There seems to be something very significant about this, for her uncle John Wood also married a Carman, and apparently was disinherited by his father for so doing. Whether John Wood's wife Mary Carman was any relation to the Carman who married Elizabeth Wood, I am unable positively to say, but I think she was, as the New Jersey Carmans originally came from Long Island. At any rate, there was some kind of a feud between the Carmans and Woods, the particulars of which, if we knew them, would probably explain many of the strange events which occurred in those early days between these families, and which to us seem otherwise unaccountable.

Children of Josiah Wood [8]

12. JOSIAH WOOD married Amy, and there are no records to show that they had any children. Josiah Wood, together with his cousin Benjamin Wood and Langhorn Biles, purchased from Josiah Wood, Sr., and Elizabeth, his wife, one-half an acre of the original Wood land at Falls for a schoolhouse. This was the first schoolhouse in the township, built in 1762.*

14. MARY (WOOD) WARD, second child of John Wood, was born (circa) 1733, at Hempstead, L. I., baptized on February 22, 1736, and married on May 1, 1775, to Daniel Ward. They had no children. She died on November 13, 1772.

15. SAMUEL WOOD, third child of John Wood, was born at Hempstead, L. I., on May 6, 1735, and married Freelove Wright on October 8, 1759. They had but one child, William, born July 17, 1760, whose name, after his father's death, was changed to Samuel. Samuel Wood was but little known, and there is practically nothing on record about him, as he died very young, in 1762, in his twenty-seventh year. Family tradition says that he was drowned in Hempstead Bay, but this is not substantiated.

The Wright Family

We know little of the Wright family beyond the fact that Elijah Wright came from Holland and settled near Hempstead, L. I., where he married Ann, who also came from Holland, and that Freelove, who married Samuel Wood, was probably their daughter.

FIFTH GENERATION

Children of Samuel Wood [15]

17. SAMUEL WOOD* was born at Oyster Bay, Queens County, N. Y., on the 17th of July, 1760. He was the only son of Samuel and Frelove Wood (Wright), and was originally christened William, but on the death of his father in 1762 his name was changed to Samuel. Owing to his father's early death he was thrown on his own resources for the acquirement of an education. His thirst for knowledge and love for books were ever ardent, and his first choice of an occupation, school-keeping, as well as his final choice, book-selling, were doubtless influenced by his tastes. 1200323

Samuel Wood was married at the age of twenty-two, and finding the profits of a country school inadequate to his needs, he tried several callings, living successively at Clinton Town, Ninepartners, N. Y. (1794), New Rochelle (1796), and finally moving to New York City in December, 1803. In 1804 he opened a book-store in a small two-story brick building at 362 Pearl Street. His business at the first consisted of the sale of miscellaneous books, many of them second-hand. He also sold paper, and cotton goods consigned by Almy & Brown, Providence, R. I. These two lines proved not profitable, and were before long discarded. He soon added a printing plant, in charge of his two sons, and commenced the publication of books on his own account.

* This biography by William C. Wood, from William Wood's notes.

Observing that what little literature was produced for children was uninteresting, if not in some cases even improper, from a strict religious standpoint, he began the preparation and reprinting of books and leaflets for youthful readers. His first publication is said to have been "The Young Child's A B C, or First Book," a little affair of sixteen pages, about three inches square, and written by himself. This was followed by numerous others in similar style, most of them illustrated by copper-plate engravings, often colored by hand. Many of these little books seem to have been made for free distribution, as Samuel Wood is known to have been in the habit of going about with his pockets full of them, and of giving them freely to the children whom he met. His purpose in this was plainly philanthropic, and the little books abound in moral prose and verse.

In 1810 he moved his store to larger quarters at 357 Pearl Street. In this year was brought out his first important publication. This was an edition of Fox's "Book of Martyrs." It was a full octavo, of 611 pages, with engraved frontispiece and a list of over four thousand subscribers, and is the first American edition of the work. At about this time he published a series of readers, following the general plan of "The Young Child's A B C," which headed the list, and entitled respectively, "The New York Primer," "The New York Preceptor," "The New York Spelling-book," and "The New York Expositor." Numerous books of a religious or devotional character, such as books of sermons, memoirs of famous Quakers, "Instances of Early Piety," etc., were published. About this time Alexander Anderson, the "father of American wood-engraving," was just becoming known and appreciated. Samuel Wood employed his art to embellish most of his books, and in some of the old advertisements it is mentioned that these are "adorned with cuts by the ingenious Anderson."

About 1811 was commenced the publication of "Wood's Almanac," compiled by Joshua Sharp, and this was continued until 1834. In 1815 Samuel Wood took into partnership two of his sons, Samuel S. and John Wood, and the firm name became Samuel Wood & Sons. In 1818 Samuel S. Wood opened a store in Baltimore, which was kept for about two years, but finally closed. In 1822 Samuel Wood & Sons moved again, to 261 Pearl Street, a property belonging to Samuel Wood. At this time another son, William Wood, was admitted to the firm, John Wood retiring. The business was increased considerably, and had become to a large extent wholesale, all kinds of books, as well as stationery, being dealt in.

The business still increasing, they moved temporarily to a store in Fulton Street, tore down the building at 261 Pearl Street and erected the substantial five-story building still standing (1903) at that place. It was considered at the time a large building to be devoted exclusively to the book business.

In 1836 Samuel Wood sold his interest in the book business to his sons Samuel S. and William Wood. The remaining years of his life were devoted to the philanthropic and charitable labors he loved.

Samuel Wood was christened in the Church of England, but in early life joined the "Society of Friends," or Quakers, of which religious body he remained an active and influential member until his death. In company with many of the philanthropists of his day, he took part in the founding of the Savings Bank, the House of Refuge, and the Society for the Prevention of Pauperism. He was an active member of these societies as well as of the Manumission Society, the Society of the New York Hospital and other benevolent institutions. As a trustee of the public schools, he was untiring in his efforts to better the condition, physical as well as educational, of the children of the city. About 1827 or 1828 he observed that ophthalmia was extremely prevalent among the pupils of the school at Bellevue, and that some of them became totally and incurably blind. Touched with their forlorn and helpless condition, he appealed to the public through the newspapers, urging the adoption of speedy measures for the relief of the sightless children of poverty. Dr. Samuel Akerly also espoused the cause, and to the exertions of these two Samuel Wood married, on August 8, 1782, Mary, daughter of John and Mary Searing, by whom he had seven sons and six daughters. She was born at Searing Town, L. I., on December 12, 1764, and died in Brooklyn, on June 19, 1855.

Samuel Wood died on May 5, 1844. He had been partially paralyzed since 1839, and his death came as a welcome end to a life full of activity and good works. His grave is in the Friends' Burying Ground in Brooklyn, now a part of Prospect Park.

The Searing Family

John Searing settled on Long Island in the latter part of the seventeenth century, and married Ann Pearson. They had one son—John, who married Elizabeth Rayner and had five children: John, Amy, Jacob, Sarah and May. John was born in 1737, died in 1822; married Mary Prior, born in 1738 (daughter of Samuel and Mary Powell, granddaughter of John and Elizabeth Bowne, the latter a daughter of John Bowne, who was the son of Thomas Bowne, born in 1595, and great granddaughter of Matthew Prior and Mary, who settled at Matinnicock prior to 1670), and had seven children—Mary, who married Samuel Wood; John, who married Mary Merritt; Amy, who married Daniel Mott; Phebe,

19. SILAS WOOD, third child of Samuel Wood, was born at Cow Neck, Queens County, L. I., on May 16, 1787. He married Julia Ann Chew Brock, daughter of Joseph and Ann Brock (nee Chew), on April 17, 1816, at Fredericksburg, Va., at the home of Mrs. Ann Chew. They had eleven children. Though born a Quaker, Silas Wood joined the Episcopal Church shortly after his marriage. He was for a long time in the wholesale flour business, residing for several years near Fredericksburg. His large acquaintance in Virginia, then the greatest wheat- and flour-producing section of the United States, influenced enormous consignments to his house in New York City. The firm was then styled Byrnes, Trimble & Co. About 1825 to 1830, Mr. Byrnes retired, and the firm name was changed to

Wood & Trimble. The manner in which Silas Wood laid the foundation of his large fortune was somewhat romantic. He was in England at the time when Napoleon escaped from Elba, and all Europe was alarmed at the possibility of a renewal of war. It was apparent that the price of all sorts of provisions would rise, and Silas Wood, together with several other merchants then in London, took the first ship sailing for America, each thinking to be the first to arrive and take advantage of the circumstances. There being no steamers, and no cable, their ship would bring to America the first information of impending disaster in Europe. They had a favorable passage, and, upon arrival at Sandy Hook, the ship anchored in the lower bay for the night. After dark, Silas Wood lowered himself over the ship's side, and, being a powerful swimmer, reached the shore safely, where he immediately went to a farmer's house, and, buying a horse, set off on a long race against time for Fredericksburg. No one knows how many horses he killed in his mad ride. Long before his fellow voyagers appeared in Virginia, he had bought up every bushel of grain in the state. The price of all foodstuffs rose tremendously, and he realized several hundred thousand dollars' profit by the transaction. Silas Wood afterwards became the head of the large house of Wood, Johnson & Burritt, where he remained until his death, on June 30, 1852.

The Brock Family

Julia Ann Chew Brock was the daughter of Joseph and Ann Brock (nee Chew). She was born in Spotsylvania County, near Fredericksburg, Va., on November 11, 1798. She died on February 16, 1863, in New York. Her mother died in New York on April 1, 1842, at the house of Silas Wood, in Houston Street.

In 1818 he went to Baltimore and opened a branch of the firm of Samuel Wood & Sons, at 212 Market Street, under the name of S. S. Wood & Co. He did a fairly successful business for a few years, when his services were required at home, and he was recalled (the Baltimore house being discontinued) and taken into partnership with his father and brother, William. Previous to 1810 he was in charge, for some time, of his father's printing plant. Samuel S. Wood never married, and died on September 24, 1861.

21. JOHN WOOD, fifth child of Samuel Wood, was born at Cow Neck, L. I., on April 20, 1791. He was always a member of the Society of Friends. On September 10, 1816, he married Sarah Mott. In 1815 he was taken into business with his father, but in 1822 he retired from the book business and became a member of the house of William F. & Samuel Mott, the firm name then changing to Mott, Wood & Merritt. John Wood was one of the managers of the Blind Asylum of New York City. He was also one of the early trustees of the Bowery Savings Bank, of New York. He died on July 25, 1850. There is no portrait of John Wood known to be in existence.

Mary Wood Seymour died May 17, 1878.

CHILDREN:

I. WILLIAM WOOD b. Aug. 21, 1824; d. Jan. 5, 1874.

24. WILLIAM WOOD, eighth child of Samuel Wood, was born at New Rochelle, N. Y., on May 6, 1797. On November 11, 1834, he married Mary S., daughter of Joshua and Mary Underhill, in the Cherry Street Meeting House, New York. They had three children. When Samuel Wood & Sons removed to 261 Pearl Street he was admitted into the firm. William Wood was always much interested in medicine and medical books, and first developed that department of their business. He was one of the young men who, in 1819, made the first movement toward establishing a mercantile library, and was one of the founders of the New York Mercantile Library. He was always a very prominent Friend—clerk of meetings, including the New York Yearly Meeting, for over thirty years, the latter position equivalent to that of bishop in other denominations. To a kindly, genial disposition was added a conservative soundness of judgment and an intellect of no mean order. Unselfish, generous and self-denying, he was the member of the family to whom all turned for advice or assistance. He died on April 9, 1877.

The Underhill Family

Capt. John Underhill, born in Warwickshire, England, about 1596, came to Boston, in 1630, with Gov. John Winthrop and his nine hundred emigrants. His wife Helena was a member of the "Old South Church" in 1633. She was the mother of John, born April 11, 1642, and Elizabeth, unmarried. Helena died at Southold, L. I., 1658. Capt. John Underhill married, second, Elizabeth, daughter of Henry Winthrop, who was a son of Henry and Elizabeth (Fones). Henry Winthrop was drowned on July 3, 1630, in attempting to swim a small river. The young widow came to Massachusetts Bay and subsequently married Robert Feaks. Elizabeth Underhill is generally supposed to have been his daughter, having grown up with the Feaks children, of whom there were five. After Capt. John Underhill's successful campaign against the Indians in New England, the Dutch government invited him to come to New Amsterdam, in 1649, and bring to their aid his proven prowess. He accepted their call. Again, in 1653, the Massachusetts government allowed him and Capt. Edward Hull to attack the Indians on Long Island, who had presumably proved troublesome to the Dutch, who occupied the western end of the island, the English having nominal control of the rest. In 1657, he bought a place in Southold and moved his family there in 1658, but, losing his wife soon, he sold his home in 1659 to Thomas Moore. He then moved west, and settled upon a grant of land in Oyster Bay, naming the place Kenilworth, joined the Society of Friends, and died on July 21, 1672. He was one of the eight men to assist the governor of New Netherlands in 1648-9. Their son Nathaniel, born February 22, 1663, died 1710, married Mary Ferris in December, 1685, and had eight children, including Abraham, who married Hannah Cromwell. They had six children, and their son Isaac, born in 1725, died December 28, 1814, married Sarah Field, and had ten children, including Joshua, born July 7, 1765, died February 14, 1839, who married October 13, 1789, Mary, born March 7, 1767, died December 12, 1820 (daughter of Richard Sutton and Elizabeth Quimby, granddaughter of Joseph and Mary Sands); and their daughter Mary, born September 8, 1805, died April 10, 1894, married William Wood.

RICHARD WOOD

GEORGE S. WOOD

26. GEORGE S. WOOD, eleventh child of Samuel Wood, was born at New Rochelle, N. Y., on August 28, 1802. He joined the Episcopal Church, and on May 22, 1845, he married Eliza Harris, of Virginia, but had no children. He was in partnership with his brother Richard Wood in the printing business, as previously recorded in the biography of Richard Wood. A number of the publications of Samuel Wood bear the imprint of Richard & George S. Wood as printers. George S. Wood died March 16, 1865.

After the death of John Wood, he and Nathaniel Merritt formed the firm of Merritt & Wood, which failed during the financial crisis of 1857, but subsequently paid their creditors in full. Edward Wood was later engaged for a short time in the real estate business. In 1880 he was elected president of the Bowery Savings Bank, and held that position until his death. He was an active member of the Volunteer Fire Department in his youth. He was a trustee of the Institution for the Blind, and of the Bowery Savings Bank, and a director of the Oriental Bank. The Hartshorne Family

Richard Hartshorne, ancestor of the Hartshornes of Old Monmouth, was a Quaker of good reputation and benevolent disposition. He came to this country in September, 1669, and soon located at the Highlands, where his descendants have since lived. The celebrated George Fox visited him in the spring of 1672, on his way to Friends' Meeting at Oyster Bay, L. I., In the latter part of June of the same year, Fox again visited him. Richard Hartshorne says he was then seventy-five years old, by which it would seem he was born about 1641, and was twenty-eight years old when he came to this country. He was named for High Sheriff of Monmouth in 1683, but declined the office. He held various positions of trust: was Town Clerk of Middletown, 1675-7; Member of the Provincial Assembly, 1683 and in other years; in Council, 1684, 1698-9; was Speaker of the Assembly, 1686, etc. In 1670, William Golding sold all his claims for land in Monmouth to Richard Hartshorne. He also owned a large tract of land at the Highlands. In the year 1703, Richard Hartshorne made a deed of gift of the Highlands estate, including Sandy Hook, to his son William. The will of Richard Hartshorne, founder of the family, was dated at Middletown, May 14, 1722, and proved May 22, 1722. He was born in Heatherne, in the northern part of Leicestershire, England. He married Margaret Carr, and had
